A Mammoth Ledge.

On April 2nd Jim Roberts and Eugene Allison, went out for a ten days prosecting trip to the extreme end of the Black Hills range, below Camp Verde about forty miles, to look after a mam-moth ledge Mr. Roberts has known of Verde, and about six miles northwest f Granite Mountain. Here so many Indians were killed a number of years age, and where one of the scouts, in heading off the Indians found a gold quartz vein, and in a couple of days he was killed by the Indians on Squaw Peak, and had several pounds of the gold ore in his pockets when found. We understand this ore that was found in the pockets of the dead scout is now in the hands of some Phoenix party. The ledge Roberts and Allison found rons east and west, three quarters of a mile below a large quartz dike, that one can see for miles. The ledge is from 75 to 125 feet wide, and the samples from the ledge taken from the bed of the creek are white-iron and sulphurets, and the same class of ore as is found in the Congress and Chapparall.—Jerome

The belief in equinoctial storms is common among common people, more particularly in reference to the March equinox. The common people are close abservers of matters that materially affect their every day affairs and from very long experience they have been led to believe that March is the windy month and that this blustry weather in someway is connected with the equinoxes.

that the equinoxes originate or increase the number of storms but that the force of these storms are increased by the equinoxes. Therefore the number of storms will not be increased at any given locality but the equinox may cause an ordinary storm to develop into a tor-nado. The critics have not investigated this point.

It is not claimed that more storm occur on March and September 21st at any one place, but that from about the 10th to the last of these months the
